Experimental Forest
in San Dimas Canyon
Dedicated by Officials

By J. L. MATTHEWS

The unveiling of a plaque on Saturday at Tanbark Flats, located at the head of San Dimas canyon, presented jointly by the Los Angeles Forest Protective association and the Los Angeles County Conservation association, at the dedication ceremonies of the San Dimas experimental forest, a unit of the California forest and range experimental station, forest service, U. S. department of agriculture, marked another milestone in the development of one of the largest projects of this character on the Pacific coast. The event attracted a gathering of 150 state and civic leaders, interested in the many problems of water conservation and watershed management in southern California.

The various speakers at the exercises stressed the fact that the yield of usable water from the chaparral-covered mountains is of vital importance to the rural and urban populations of the valleys of southern California. As these watersheds, furnishing most of the water available to these territories, are largely within national forests, the problem of increasing their water productivity is of concern to the research division of the U. S. forest service, and for this reason the California forest and range experimental station has initiated this comprehensive investigation of watershed management within the chaparral region.

Among those present were: William S. Rosecrans, president Los Angeles County Conservation association; E. I. Kukul, director California experimental station; Albert Jones, president American Society of Engineers; R. W. Pilling, director SERA Los Angeles county; Roy Pomeroy, assistant director SERA; Jay Price, regional forester, San Francisco; William Mendenhall, supervisor Angeles forest; Don Sinclair, director-in-charge, San Dimas forest; John Cotton, engineer-in-charge; George Cecil, Los Angeles Conservation association; H. S. Gilman, member state forestry board; Jack Albers, president Angeles Forest Protective association; C. E. Granger, secretary Angeles Forest Protective association; Knoles Ryerson, U. S. department of agriculture; M. R. Kral, U. S. experiment station.

Preceding the dedication ceremonies the visitors, under the direction of Don Sinclair, resident director-in-charge, were escorted on a tour of inspection of the permanent station facilities, which have been installed for the conduct of experimental work and the housing of technical personnel, including dwellings, laboratory, garage, shop, power plant, and stable. These are of a substantial and extensive character, as the solution of the problems involved in this investigation is expected to require a period of thirty years or more. With the exception of the placement of the delicate instruments, requiring technical knowledge and experience, the work has been done largely by men of the CCC, CWA and SERA camps, located in the canyons during the past two years.

During the evening a steak supper was served in the dining room of the SERA camp, which adjoins the station.

EXPERIMENTAL AREA

The San Dimas experimental forest, located in the Sierra Madre mountains northeast of Glendora, has an area of approximately 17,000 acres, which includes the drainage basins of the San Dimas and Big Dalton canyons.

The investigations now being conducted in the forest have, in general, a two-fold purpose: first, to make a quantitative determination of the re-

Badillo Street Barber
Taken to Hospital

Eugene R. DeMonbrun, West Badillo street barber, was taken to the General hospital in Los Angeles on Monday, following the recurrence of a serious illness early Sunday morning.

Twenty members of the Covina Moose lodge went to Los Angeles Tuesday evening to offer themselves for blood transfusions, but friends from Long Beach had already furnished all that was necessary for the time being. Mr. DeMonbrun is reported to be in a serious condition, with the doctors offering little hope for his recovery.

Moose Hold Dinner and Dance Affair

The family dinner and dance given Monday evening by Covina lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, was attended by more than one hundred guests and was one of the most enjoyable social affairs given by the order this season.

On account of the alterations being made in the corner building, where Moose hall is located, the dinner was held in Legion hall. The committee in charge included Eugene Cheuning, Barney Dial, Alphonse Bastide, Robert Jones, and Clint Laswell.

Daily Vacation
Bible School
Opened Monday

The daily vacation Bible school, sponsored by the churches of the city and headed by Mrs. Ella B. Patton, opened in the grammar school Monday morning with an attendance of eighty, which had increased to nearly 150 by the end of the week. The sessions begin at 8:45 and dismiss at 11:45, and will continue until July 3.

Besides the religious training given the children, which this week included study of the Old Testament, the boys are given instruction in toy making, with sewing classes for the girls. Mrs. Patton is assisted by voluntary helpers from practically all of the churches of the city. Commenting on the first week of the school, Mrs. Patton said Thursday, "Our church vacation school is making better progress than we even hoped for. The children are having one week of special talks on how to build their own character, and we can see the results of these talks in the conduct of the boys and girls in both their work and their play."

Mrs. Alice Suling, noted specialty educator, who has served in juvenile courts in many cities and who has made a special study of problem children, who has just finished a course in constructive child guidance, is the speaker at the school. The Pasadena community school, which has been a popular feature of the celebration in past years, will be of a higher class than before, with food and substantial merchandise being offered as the prizes instead of the usual nicknacks that have no practical value. The Boy Scouts, according to Chairman Guy Harris, will have an active part in the program of the day in many different ways.

Closing the celebration there will be a fireworks display at the park in the evening, followed by a dance, which this year will be held in the high school gym, with Paul Leonard and his ten-piece Long Beach orchestra furnishing the music. This orchestra is one of the most popular dance music organizations in southern California and will do much to attract dancers from nearby towns. The orchestra has its own amplifier, so that the music will be equally clear in all parts of the dance hall. The popularity contest will, as in the past, be in charge of the Rotary club. The complete program will be published in the Argus next week.

This (Friday) afternoon Mrs. Suling is giving a special lecture for mothers at the grammar school and all mothers in the city and vicinity are invited to hear her and to see for themselves the work that is being done among the children.

Student of Medicine
Home From College

Richard Webb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Webb of East Badillo street, is spending a short time at the home of his parents before he leaves to take the post of camp doctor at the Trail Lake guest ranch in Dubois, Wyoming, during the months of July and August. Richard has completed his third year at the University of Pennsylvania medical school in Philadelphia.

During his stay in southern California he will usher at the wedding of James Kennedy, a former classmate of Stanford university in Palo Alto, which is to be held Wednesday evening at the All-Saints' church in Beverly Hills. Mr. Kennedy is to be married to Miss Helen Rockwell, formerly of Covina.

Party Leaves for Long Camping Trip

Dr. and Mrs. Wellesley P. Magan and two children, Billy and Margaret, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Overholzer, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Graham and two children of Montebello will leave the latter part of this week by motor for a two-months' vacation. Their destination will be Canada, where they will visit the many scenic points of interest, including Banff and Lake Louise.

During their absence the home of Dr. and Mrs. Magan will be occupied by Dr. and Mrs. E. Norwood and baby.

GRADUATES FROM WHITTIER

Samuel McElfresh, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. McElfresh, graduated from Whittier college last week. Mr. McElfresh matriculated in Y.M.C.A. work. Miss Faith McElfresh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McElfresh, a student of Citrus junior college, received her degree at the graduation exercises at the college held last week.

CELEBRATION
SURPASS PAST

Day Most Complete in Entertainment in Series of Events

Plans for the celebration of the Fourth of July in Covina city park are being rapidly completed, with the prospects that the day will be one of the most complete in entertainment and amusement in the twelve years that the Lions club has sponsored the celebration.

The athletic events of the day will begin at ten o'clock in the morning and will continue through the afternoon, with other entertainment to be provided in the park for those who are not interested in the various athletic contests. More than $250 in prizes have been donated by the businessmen of the city and are now being arranged as awards for the races and other contests, every age to be provided for by the committee in charge. Prizes will be on display next week at the Severyn furniture store. There will be a baseball game in the afternoon, and lovers of horseshoe pitching will be glad to know that a tournament is being arranged for their benefit.

The concessions, which have always been a popular feature of the celebration in past years, will be of a higher class than before, with food and substantial merchandise being offered as the prizes instead of the usual nicknacks that have no practical value. The Boy Scouts, according to Chairman Guy Harris, will have an active part in the program of the day in many different ways.

Closing the celebration there will be a fireworks display at the park in the evening, followed by a dance, which this year will be held in the high school gym, with Paul Leonard and his ten-piece Long Beach orchestra furnishing the music. The orchestra has its own amplifier, so that the music will be equally clear in all parts of the dance hall. The popularity contest will, as in the past, be in charge of the Rotary club. The complete program will be published in the Argus next week.

Griffith, a railroad executive, in Salt Lake City, May 10, 1934. She is survived by her husband, a brother, Herbert Fuller, of Los Angeles, and a sister, Mrs. W. G. Morse, of Chicago.

Student and Alumni
Dance Ends Season

Bringing to a close the dances which have added much to the student life at the high school, a combined alumni and student reunion was held on Friday evening of last week at the gymnasium at the high school, following the graduation exercises, with two hundred and fifty in attendance. The carnival theme was carried out, adding a festive note to the occasion. Paul Leonard's orchestra of Long Beach furnished the music. Mrs. J. H. Wilke and Mrs. Roy Winder were in charge of the affair.

John W. Clanton, Norwalk, is president of the association; Wilbur E. Warr, Covina, vice-president; and Bessie G. Rouse, Los Angeles, secretary.

NEW UNIT FOR
TO BE BUILT

SERA Funds to Aid
in Financing Arts
Unit of Plant

Following a special meeting of the board of trustees, Superintendent Ben S. Millikan of the Covina union high school district announced yesterday the immediate construction of a new arts unit to the school's educational plant. The new structure will occupy a place on the campus immediately north of the main building, now used for executive offices and assembly purposes. The building will face on Citrus avenue.

The structure will be constructed as an SERA project, the federal government providing funds for all labor employed, and in addition 25 percent of the cost of material used. The balance of the funds needed, approximately $16,000, will be paid out of reserve moneys which have been accumulated by the district during a period of years. The federal funds are a direct gift. The unit, when completed will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

The exterior of the new building, 65x150 feet, three-story, will be a duplicate of the science building on the south side of the campus, and when finished will complete the group of buildings as originally planned by the district.

The trustees have employed John supervise the construction of the new building. The new construction program received the unanimous support of the members of the school board—W. B. Palmer, Charles Oak; W. S. Sawyer, West Covina; John Morgan, Baldwin Park; Thomas B. Reed and Herman Allison, Covina.

Shell Oil Station
Open for Business

The new Shell oil station was opened yesterday afternoon with Ted Hoogendyk in charge, assisted by Frank Brandon and "Babe" Coltrin. The station was built by the Nigg Engineering corporation and is a model of convenience to patrons and student attendants as well. One of the features is the new electric greasing hoist, the second of the kind to be erected in southern California. It has an automatic lock that operates when it has reached the proper height and the clearance underneath the car gives additional room for proper greasing. Large rest rooms with modern plumbing fixtures have been provided for both men and women.

While the station is now open for business, the formal opening and inspection will not be held until next week.

Ford, Les Ferguson, George Ross, Charles Ham, and John Tallman. A number of the members and their wives are planning to attend the convention which is in session the latter part of this week.

Earthquake Shocks
Felt in Valley

Light sleepers thruout the San Gabriel valley were awakened repeatedly during the early hours on Wednesday morning by four distinct but minor earthquake shocks. Two of them were said to be intense enough to cause damage at the point of origin as recorded on the instrument at the Carnegie Seismological Institute in Pasadena.

The third and strongest quake in this valley occurred at 3:17 a.m., but aside from rattling dishes and windows and stopping clocks, no damage was recorded. According to the Pasadena institute this quake originated about fifty miles from Pasadena in a northeasterly direction. The other strong shock occurred about 1:56, and centered about four hundred and fifty miles away.

The two lesser shocks were felt at 2:26 and 3:08 a.m., as announced by the attendants at the institute.

Annual Firemen's
Ball to Be Held
Tomorrow Night

The annual firemen's ball, always one of the outstanding social events of the season in Covina, will be held Saturday night at the high school gym, with Casper's six-piece orchestra from Glendora furnishing the music. The committee in charge will be Roy Goodell, chairman, Henry Brandon, George Haynes, and John Koch.

Members of the fire department, who receive compensation only when called upon to extinguish fires in the city, always have been active in community affairs and maintain a fund to care for charity cases that come to their attention, many baskets of food being distributed thruout the year by the organization, without ostentation and with few in Covina knowing when the food is taken to those who are in need, although people generally know that the department is always ready to help in the hour of need.

For this reason there has been a large advance sale of dance tickets for Saturday night, and it is expected that the attendance will be the largest in the history of the organization.

Registration Date
for Bond Election to Close July 3

Wednesday, July 3, is the last day to register in order to vote at the special state election set for August 13, when the voters will be asked to approve a $13,950,000 bond issue for enlarging and improving state institutions, it was announced this week by W. M. Kerr, registrar of voters.

Election boards must be appointed by July 13, and polling places also designated by that time. This leaves less than two weeks for local residents to register, and less than a month for the board of supervisors to make up the election boards.

The voters also will be asked at the same election to decide whether the state should be permitted to handle its present general fund deficit of $28,000,000 by means of short-term loans, rather than registered warrants.

Purchase of a site in southern California for a new state prison, enlargement of the state building in Los Angeles with $1,000,300 of the issue, and a similar enlargement to the capitol at Sacramento would be provided by the bond issue, in addition to enlarging institutions in general.

Allocation from the federal government is expected to boost the total available, under the public works project bill.

COUNCILMEN

Engineers Tell How
Latest Methods
Are Installed

Discussion of the sewage disposal plant occupied the attention of the city council at its regular meeting Monday night.

City Engineer Alva Smith, who designed the plant, was present and explained that several changes had been made in the plans, covering points that had been objected to in some of the protests that have been sent to the state board of health and which, he said, would make the plant one of the most modern in the state, and included the chlorination of the water, as it left the plant so that there could be no possible chance of water contamination.

Assistant Engineer Glenn Crawford also has been busy during the past week taking samples of water from wells near disposal plants in various parts of the county, these samples, when given chemical analysis, all being pronounced 100 per cent pure by qualified chemists in Los Angeles.

On account of the project being in danger of losing the $139,000 grant by the federal government, Mayor George Maxfield has issued an appeal to all civic organizations in the city to address resolutions to the state board of health to grant the petition of the city of Covina immediately, in order that work may be started on the plant.

"Covina probably never will have such an opportunity again," Mayor Maxfield said. "With an expenditure of only $20,000, all the money Covina has for the purpose, the government has granted us $139,000 to complete the project. The federal relief fund is going to be spent and we will have to pay our share of this in taxes eventually, whether this city gets any share of it or not, and it is up to us to do everything in our power to secure this permit, not only to secure this federal aid and provide work for many unemployed, but to make certain of our own sanitary safety as well."

"I would like to urge that every organization in the city send resolutions to the state board urging it to give our petition favorable consideration, pointing out the danger to our community from the growing number of cesspools and the saturation of our soil with untreated sewage, which would be overcome by the construction of the proposed treatment plant. It would also help a great deal if individual citizens would write to the board asking for immediate action. Letters should be addressed to the state board of health, Sacramento."

Robberies Reported
on Two Occasions

Daylight orange thieves Wednesday visited the Catalina grove at the corner of Hollenbeck and Vine streets, but were frightened away before securing any fruit, due to the quick arrival of deputy-sheriffs, who came in a radio car within eight minutes from the time the call was sent in.

Another daylight robbery was reported last week in the theft of two medical bags containing valuable equipment from the car of Dr. C. A. McDowell, which was parked on Cottage Drive at the side of the Springer pharmacy.

GOOD FISHING

T. P. Logan of the Drew Carriage company and his brother-in-law, Dr. P. L. Rasmussen of Ontario, spent the early part of the week on a trip to Henderson lake, where they report excellent fishing, often catching more than ten o'clock in the morning, all being good-sized fish. They returned Wednesday evening.

Ward Austin Gets Advanced Position

Ward H. Austin, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Austin of North Citrus avenue, was elected to the position of vice-principal and dean of men at the Marin county junior college last week. He has been at the head of the engineering department of the college for the past five years. The resignation of Paul Mohr was responsible for the advancement. Mr. Austin was a graduate of Covina high school in 1914.

Starting with the Sunday-school hour at 10 o'clock, the assembly at 11 o'clock will be addressed by Dr. D. W. Kurtz, president of Bethany Biblical seminary, Chicago. At 12:15 basket dinners will be partaken of, and at 2:30 the anniversary program will be rendered. Dr. Kurtz will speak again at the evening service.

For the luncheon at noon as many chairs and tables as it has been possible to procure will be placed on the church and high school lawns, but those in charge are asking that those who can bring card tables, folding chairs, and beach umbrellas.

Dr. Kurtz, the speaker of the day, is recognized as an outstanding lecturer and minister. He has spoken in Covina on previous occasions and always creates a profound impression.

The Church of the Brethren has always been one of the largest in Covina and has had a leading part in the religious life of the city and valley. In view of this a short history of the organization has been prepared by Mrs. Eulalia Overholzer from church minutes, from notes kept by the late Derius Overholzer, and by word of mouth, as follows:

It is rather difficult to collect and record facts as history. If we could, lift the veil that lies between us and the past, could see those eighteen souls who first constituted our church, see those who left their homes in the old world for the new and follow them as they carried the gospel message northward, southward, and westward, we would have a more fitting background for the history we are trying to give of the first church in California. On June 1855, eighteen members met at the home of Martin Bashore on the corner of Citrus avenue and Puente street, where they organized the first Church of the Brethren in California, and named it the church of southern California, for the members were residents of seven or eight counties.

They had come from Kansas, Colorado, Tennessee, Indiana, Iowa, Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois to make their homes in this new country. The following people were charter members: A. F. Deeter and wife, J. S. Flory and wife, America Finch, Joseph I. Finch, Dewey Finch, Felix Riley and wife, N. D. Haddell, Felix Hess and wife, L. E. Miller and wife, Susan Bashore, Esther and Ella Middaugh, and Christy Wine. Two charter members are still living in Glendora, Felix Hess and Dewey Finch.

A. F. Deeter and J. S. Flory were given charge of the church and Christy Wine was chosen clerk. They decided at this meeting to raise money to build a house of worship, of which I will speak later.

The building committee was Levi Riley, C. Wine, Martin Bashore, N. D. Haddell, and Ella Middaugh. This part of California was not as beautiful as it is now, for the sandwheels and weeds were higher than the mules which drew the wagons of the land. The tract was owned by Mr. Phillips. He held the price for

W. C. Kings Moving to Long Beach

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. King and daughter, Barbara, who make their home on ranch property on East Puente street, will leave next week for Belmont Shore, Long Beach, where they will make their home. Mr. King, a lieutenant in the navy, will have charge of flight instruction at the naval reserve base at Long Beach. He will serve in active duty for the next three years.

Lieutenant King has many hours of flight to his credit and has maintained an active interest in matters pertaining to aviation, being one of the sponsors of the contest for amateur airplane modeling which was held a short time ago. Mr. and Mrs. King for many years have resided in Covina for the most part, both receiving their early training in the local schools.

TRY IT

When I started out this morning Men looked at me and gazed. The usual smiles were missing. If they knew it, no one cared. I wondered then why this should be. Why men should treat me so. Later, I found the fault was mine. But this I did not know.

As day went on my troubles grew And all my work went wrong. I lost my temper several times, Which helped my trials along. I snapped at those who came my way And they snapped back with vim; The men who usually laughed with me Were scowling-faced and grim.

And then at last it dawned on me That I was all to blame, That when my face showed bitterness,

Why, theirs would show the same; And so I looked within myself And hunted up a smile; If you do not think that helps a lot, Just try it for a while.

—W. E. W.

Last fall St. Louis baseball fans carried Dizzy Dean on their shoulders and last week the same fans almost booed him off the field—all because he had lost his temper.

It is natural, we have been told for married men to feel sort of guilty when their wives are away whether they have been up to any mischief or not. Last week we were going past the Pay'n Takit just as Pete Graham was changing a crate of berries. "Pete," we said, "your wife will probably hurry back from Oklahoma when she sees the Argus this week." Pete dropped the crate and spilled berries all over the walk, but we had moved on up the street in spite of his "Hey, you! Come back here. Who told you anything about Saturday night?" And here we hadn't heard a dog-gone thing about Saturday night.

Those "Grass Rooters" back in Illinois adopted some funny resolutions for their 1936 platform. "Enforcement of law," and "A full ginser, will never know how near he came to being put out of his misery last Thursday. Just as we were closing the last form of the Argus, Glenn came in and asked, "Is it too late to get in an article about the state board of health issuing the permit for Covina to build the sewage disposal plant?" In a jiffy the office was in one of those turn-of-events in the imaginary newspaper scenes in the moving pictures. "Stop the press!" "Hold the forms!" and all the other exciting terms that are supposed to be used in a newspaper office were going back and forth. Carl Shirley called a conference. "You go ahead, Bill, and write the story and while you are doing that, Al and I will see what we can take out to make room for it." We flopped down to the typewriter and told Glenn to give us the dope, and he was snappy about it. "They haven't issued the permit," he said, "I just wondered what you would do if they did."

Our wonderful control over our feelings is shown by the fact that Glenn is still able to be about his work.

We're worried. We can't find out how many fish Tom Logan really caught.

The papers that are making such a clamor over the Clara Phillips parole are the same ones that blazon every murder all over their front pages, doing nothing to popularize crime than anything else in the state. Do something for the good of humanity and you get three lines buried on an inside page, but commit a murder and you get a streamer and your picture on the front page.

We have been down in the dumps this week but Eddie Nelson brought us out of it—and how!

Charlie Sickles handed this to us to figure out. It is the old question of how many apples Adam and Eve ate. Charlie says he submitted the question to the gang at the Edison company and here is the way they figured it:

Some said Eve 8 and Adam 2—a total of only 10.

Now we said others figure the thing out far differently: Eve 8 and Adam 8—a total of 16.

We think, another group ventured, the above figures are entirely wrong. If Eve 8 and Adam 82, certainly the total will be 90.

Others, however, on the strength of the theory that the antediluvians were giants, reasoned something like this: Eve 81 and Adam 82—totaling 163.

Wrong again, cried another group. What could be clearer than if Eve 81 and Adam 812, the total was 893?

I believe, ventured another, the following to be the true solution: Eve 814 Adam, and Adam 8124 Eve, making a total of 8938.

Leave it to the Edison bunch to make light of a burning question like this.

Results Given in Study of Citrus Bark Diseases

The agricultural extension service, cooperating with the Los Angeles county farm bureau, has just completed a series of citrus bark and root diseases. A. G. Salter, assistant farm advisor in Los Angeles county, gives the following summary of these meetings:

1. BROWN ROT GUMMOSIS.—This is a disease which may appear on the trunks of our citrus trees, the first appearance being the formation of beads of gum on the trunk of the tree near the ground level. If these beads of gum are scraped away, a discoloration of mineral brown or fawn color may be observed. This diseased area should be cut out and the area disinfected with permanganate of potassium. The area should be cut out two inches above, two inches below, and one-half inch on each side of the discoloration. Careful inspection of trees for this disease is advisable because during the spring months it grows rapidly.

2. SHIELL BARK.—This is one of our common diseases of lemons and unless the disease is growing rapidly on young trees the agricultural extension service does not recommend scraping. This disease goes in cycles of five years and under most conditions it is poor economy to treat for it.

3. OAK ROOT FUNGUS.—This is a root disease which can be identified by a white, threadlike growth between the bark and the inside of the root and sometimes a purple, threadlike growth on the outside of the root may be seen. The roots become watery and soft and often have a mushroom odor. The above-ground symptoms of this disease are the same as any root trouble which causes the leaves to drop and turn lighter in color. If these above-ground symptoms are present, it is wise to inspect the trees, and if any above-ground symptoms of this disease are present to treat the soil with carbon bisulphide. The method is to punch holes two feet apart in every direction to a depth of eighteen inches and place an ounce and a half of carbon bisulphide in each hole and cover immediately.

4. SCALY BARK.—This is one of the most common trunk diseases of citrus trees and Dr. Fawcett of the University of California citrus experiment station at Riverside has proved that it is a virus disease. The same recommendations for treatment hold true as have been given in past years. However, with Dr. Fawcett's new findings, citrus growers should have more courage to pull out scaly bark trees after they have gone down in production due to the knowledge of its being a virus disease. The treatment, which is scraping of the bark of the tree, will not control the disease when it is in a systemic form. New, beginning forming a control.

Party of Four Leaves for Interior of Mexico

Mrs. Jack Schissler and two sons, Jack and Sidney, of San Bernardino road, accompanied by Robert Vinney, are leaving the latter part of this week by motor for the interior of Mexico to spend the summer months with Mr. Schissler, who is engaged as an engineer in the mines. During their absence the Schissler home will be occupied by Mrs. Virginia Upson and son.

LAKE FISHING GOOD

Large Class of High School Graduates in Final Event of Year

In step with Mendelssohn's Processional, "War March of the Priests," played by the school orchestra, one hundred thirty-two graduates of the class of '35 passed thru the portals of Covina union high school on Friday evening last, to occupy an improvised stage, where later they received their diplomas in the presence of over 1500 relatives and friends, gathered on the grass-covered grounds facing the building. The scene was one of beauty, the pastel shades of the gowns worn by the girl graduates being accentuated by the shadows of the early evening, as the sun was setting in the west.

Invocation by Rev. Bertrand M. Hause, rector of Holy Trinity church, followed, and after two numbers by the girls' glee club, under the direction of Frank Cummings, the graduates were addressed by Dr. Roy Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Los Angeles, who chose as his theme, "There Is No More West."

"The speaker said in part: 'We can no longer depend upon the west' to absorb the workers for whom we have no need in factories, and we can no longer depend, permanently at least, upon 'foreign trade' to save us. We must find some system of economic organization by which the whole nation can be fed, clothed, housed, educated and provided with a self-respecting means of support and development, without dependence upon the west—for there is no more west."

"This speaker is not attempting to describe what that 'system' of economics is to be. That is not his responsibility as a Christian minister, but as a representative of 'The Kingdom of God on earth,' as taught by Jesus of Nazareth, he has a responsibility for demanding that that 'system' shall conform to certain moral and ethical standards that the spiritual values of life may be conserved for the people. Further, too, as a Christian minister, it is his responsibility to urge upon the people that certain attitudes of mind be maintained during the period of readjustment while we are trying to rearrange life for a day when there is no more west."

"First of all, there must be a frank recognition of the necessity of change. Obviously, a system that produces periodic crises and a permanent displacement of millions of trained and willing workers is too cruel and disastrous to be tolerated permanently. Government loans, billions for relief, and all such expedients are equally futile. An economic system that cannot enable the people to maintain their standard of living in the face of such a crisis is a system that is a failure. It is impossible for the people to go on indefinitely expecting the government to supply prosperity. The public purse is not filled by any magic, but by taking from the taxpayers money that has been earned by industry and frugality. There is a limit past which the government cannot burden the people. The economic system must be so organized that it will not be necessary for the government to provide doles for business at periodic intervals."

"The right to make changes in our form of government, if those changes are for the benefit of the majority of the people, is fundamental Americanism according to the Declaration of Independence. The acid test of democracy is this: are we able to examine proposals of change with an open mind, without prejudice, and with sufficient clarity of judgment to enable us to determine the ultimate result of such changes? Having discovered that a given program promises increased benefits to the majority, are we sufficiently dedicated to the cause of democracy to cause us to consent to these changes even if they require personal sacrifices of us, individually?"

Supervisors Defer Action Concerning Transmission Line

No further action will be taken on behalf of the board of supervisors to protest the original routing of Los Angeles city's Boulder dam transmission line until the return of Supervisor H. C. Legg from Washington, a delegation of property owners was told by Supervisor Gordon L. McDonough, chairman pro tem of the board, at a visit Monday.

Most of the members of the delegation were from Claremont, La Verne and San Dimas, communities most affected by the foothill routing selected by the city for the 144-foot-high towers. Spokesman for the group was William Clary, Los Angeles attorney, who has been retained by the objectors.

Clary urged that the supervisors go on record asking the Reconstruction Finance corporation to make an impartial investigation of not only the foothill route selected, but also of several proposed alternate routes.

"We believe the route should be located where it will do the least possible harm to the surrounding property," McClary told the three board members present. "We are not trying to move the line over into some other community necessarily, and we do not contend that the location should not necessarily be at any of the proposed locations."

of the old-fashioned economics of Genesis—"by the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread."

"The past has belonged to the man who could move west. The present belongs to the unemployed. Tomorrow will belong to the man who can set his spiritual health above his economic prosperity and turn back into the east again, there to find justice, brotherhood, honor, fair-dealing, hope, faith, and peace."

At the conclusion of the commencement address, Winifred Chapin, Helen Gibson, Yula Atkinson, Lorraine Dominguez, Louise Pollard, and Marilla Card, composing the high school senior sextet, sang "The Green Cathedral" (Hahn), with a violin obbligato by Richard Willis, and Mildred Palmer, accompanist.

The class was presented to the chairman of the board of trustees, W. S. Sawyer, who, following a few remarks, delivered the diplomas as the graduates in a continuous procession marched before him.

Virginia Ireland, a graduate of the Baldwin Park district, was awarded a gold medal in recognition of the distinction of having never been absent or tardy during her intermediate and high school years.

Allan White, Frances LaRue and Hale Cuppett graduated with high honors, and the names of Richard Willis, Janet Knotts, Lois Bosworth and Toru Kimura were found upon the honor roll.

Donna Marie Young, these latter receiving their diplomas from V. R. Ross, principal of the evening school.

"We do say, however, that the city has not made the careful study that the Metropolitan water district did, for example, when deciding to locate its aqueduct lines. We understand that sixty-five separate routes were surveyed for that project."

"We came here expecting to find a Puente delegation before the board, and we wanted to assure Puente of our desire to cooperate to find an alternate route that would do harm to no one. We question whether any serious study has been made thru the China district. The power bureau has admitted to us that the foothill line was the only one surveyed, and they asked us to show them where it could better be located."

Owners May Redeem Delinquent Taxes

Under the terms of assembly bill No. 1034 covering the redemption of real estate from delinquent taxes, signed by the governor on June 12 and immediately effective, property owners are entitled to make complete redemption of property delinquent in 1933 or prior, by the payment of taxes alone, without any penalties, costs or interest.

This does not apply to 1934 taxes except where there is a prior delinquency on the same property.

In the event redemption is now being made on the ten-payment plan, the owner is entitled to redeem on the basis provided by the new law and have a deduction for the total amount of all payments previously made.

Merchants Fail to Win Against Colton Team

The chances of Manager Granny Wilson's Covina Merchants night-ball team handling Colton, American night-ball league leaders, their third straight defeat, were blasted last Friday as the latter team blanked the locals by a slim 2-0 score in a thrilling fray held on the winners' diamond.

The game turned out to be a pitching duel between Lionel Brown of Covina and Bots of Colton. Bots is rated as perhaps the best pitcher in the American league and turned in a very outstanding performance, as he struck out no less than twenty-three batters, allowing the home boys but five hits. Brown did well for himself by fanning fifteen Colton sluggers, allowing them but six safeties.

Babe Coltrin's double in the first inning was the only hope gained by the locals for that frame, but even that hope was lost in the second half of the opening inning as a Covina error, followed by a Colton single, netted Colton's first score.

Although both teams got scattered hits through the next few innings, the second and final Colton score was not tallied until the eighth stanza. An error by the Covina third baseman gave Emery, Colton center fielder and first batter for the inning, a chance on first base, and Emery was followed by Alexander, playing right field for the winners, who managed to bang out a single, advancing Emery. The next two Colton batters flied out to the Covina hurler, but Watson, first baseman for Colton, connected with a pitched ball to batters flied out to the Covina shortstop and Emery scored the second and final run on the play.

Bots niftily abandoned all Covina hopes of tying the score in the ninth by striking out the first three batters.

Leading the hit sheet for Covina was Babe Coltrin, center fielder, who collected three-fifths of the total hits with a pair of two-base smashes and a single, to bat 1,000 per cent. Ham Tallman and Widener were responsible for the remaining two Covina hits, both of which were singles.

Riverside Rubes in 5-1 Victory Over Merchants

Defeat again rode the Covina Merchants night-ball club as the Riverside Rubes nine managed to push over a 5-1 victory over the locals last Tuesday night in a league game held on the winners' diamond.

A spectacular type of Riverside fielding cramped the Covina batters to a great extent, while, although the locals erred but twice, the winners managed to place their hits very nicely out of reach of Covina fielders.

The only Covina tally came in the opening stanza, when A. Brown, first baseman for Manager Wilson, smashed out a 5-bagger and then scored as the Riverside left fielder erred.

The first Riverside score came in the second frame as a walk, a Covina error and three singles netted the Rubes two runs for a 2-1 lead. Although the winners poked out three safeties in both the third and fourth innings, they were held without further score until the latter part of the fourth, when three singles netted the third Riverside score.

The final Riverside scores came in the sixth frame as Covina errors followed by a walk, two singles and a double by the Rubes sluggers pushed across the fourth and fifth runs.

The Riverside batters found Lionel Brown, Covina chucker, for thirteen hits, while Parsons, Rubes hurler, held the local bat wielders to five safeties during the nine innings. Parsons also led Brown in number of strikeouts by a 14-11 margin.

Leading the Riverside batters was Tucker, right fielder, who banged out a double and two singles in five trips to the plate. Al Brown, smashing out a pair of doubles in four times to bat, topped the Covina hit list.

Girls' Ball Team Wins Ball Game From San Pedro

Hovey Cook's "Millionaire Kid" girls' baseball team marked another decisive victory last Tuesday night when they trounced the San Pedro girls' team 18-4 in a one-sided affair played on the Covina city park diamond.

The local girls started off a slugging spree in their half of the opening stanza and, aided by two San Pedro errors and a single, sent in three tallies. The visitors managed to tally once in the second frame, but the locals scored twice in the same inning.

Cook's team went on a real batting orgy in the fourth stanza to amass a total of twelve runs on nine hits, four of which were home runs. The San Pedro team never threatened the Covina victory, which was well safeguarded by the outstanding pitching of Tessie Doderhoff. Leading the Covina batting was E. Hall, who managed to smash out three safeties in four times to bat.

Dr. Charles Hodges of New York university, who is an authority on the political aspects of international relations, and Dr. Howard W. Odum of North Carolina university, who has done outstanding work in the field of race relations, are scheduled for three lectures each in the place of Dr. Takaki of Tokyo university. Dr. Aurelia Reinhardt, president of Mills college, will speak on the evening of July 1, instead of Dr. Mary Woolley, whose trip to the west coast was cancelled on account of illness in her family.

Scale Situation Called Worst in Many Years

The black scale situation is the worst it has been for many years. This condition exists quite generally from Santa Barbara to San Diego counties and throughout the interior. At present the scale is mostly in the egg stage with the hatch starting in the coastal area the development is quite regular, but in the interior many orchards show marked variation in size of scale. There has been very little natural mortality to date. Scutellista and Aphyus are beginning to appear.

Considering the present condition of hatch, which is behind normal, it appears highly improbable that even in the most advanced districts control work will start before the middle of July. Fruit is also backward.

This situation indicates demand for a tremendous amount of control work, and difficulty in control with a single treatment may be experienced in many orchards. In badly infested orchards, particularly in the interior, honyeweed and sooty mold are so heavy that there is likely to be severe tree injury and heavy reduction in crop. Spray or fumigation are valueless as well as hazardous at the present time. Growers who desire to apply some method of temporary relief may use sulfur dust. While sulfur dust checks and removes sooty mold, it must be borne in mind that its use prior to or during hot weather is attended with a degree of hazard. Sulfur dust applied at the beginning of the hatch frequently makes later control by fumigating or spraying in warm interior areas more effective.

OUR FOURTH ANNUAL

SPRING LAMB SALE

In 1932, Western sheepmen asked our help in marketing their lambs. Our first Lamb Week was the result. The sheepmen received a fair price for their lambs, and we brought the real bargains thus offered, bought a half million pounds of lamb from us in that week.

Thus began our famous producer-consumer campaign, now so popular with both producer and consumer. They bring about distribution without waste of either time or money. The spring lamb we've purchased for this fourth annual producer-consumer lamb campaign is expertly selected for tenderness, young, sweet-flavored, juicy meat. Easy to cook; easy to carve; and very easy to eat.

There is no technicality of language or of law to which men and governments will not resort in order to escape the obligation to remain true to their pledged faith. It is precisely this which is the matter with the twentieth century world—fundamental and far-reaching lack of moral integrity.

President Columbia University.

"The Master of the Inn"

In the midst of a materialistic world, Frank Miller, "Master of the Inn" at Riverside, fashioned for himself a lasting niche in Memory's hall of fame for aesthetics.

He died at the close of last week, revered and memorialized for the beautiful things he visualized for the rest of us. He linked the sentimental and romantic past with the prosaic present, and, incidentally, revealed to his associates that sentiment has a commercial value.

Frank Miller built the great Mission inn from the nucleus of an adobe house, and filled it with strange and thought-provoking reminders of California heritage. Not a room or a corner of that unique caravanserai but which contains something that arrests the attention—curiously-wrought bells from many lands and used for worship by many creeds; tapestries that came from the hands of Indian squaws, revealing a lost artistry; paintings from Spanish missions whose walls have returned to earth again; Franciscan relics that serve to teach us the softer, more delicate history of this golden land otherwise drenched with the blood and tears of conquest and greedy acquisition.

Frank Miller's touch in the building of the inn is found in many of its business details. Those "Grass Rooters" who, in the Illinois adobe, its streets and parks, and its situations, fared with the artistic. Yet, he made his inn a place of business. He loved the beautiful in life, but he proved to practical business man. The vase of fresh flowers and the silver tray of oranges greeting the new guest in his hotel room was a gracious welcome, but it served to bring the guest back again and again to his hostelry. The soft notes of a harp in an alcove during the dinner hour, instead of a raucous jazz orchestra sent the jaded traveler out with a sense of rest and peace.

"The Master of the Inn" was greatly appreciated in life, especially in that period of his golden afternoon. He is not one for whom all praise has been deferred until he was to be returned to his fathers. His associates loved him, and manifested their love. In his latter years he had taken on some of the glamour and tradition that originally belonged to Junipero Serra, the brown-robed padre of the plains, the lovable character who had well-nigh become Frank Miller's patron saint.

Years ago this writer remembers an address by Vice-President McCormick of the Southern Pacific company, titled "Sentiment in Business." It was delivered at a dinner in the Mission inn, and traced the incalculable value of beauty and artistic fidelity in its relation to successful commerce and trade. It was in effect a tribute to Frank Miller, the evening's honored guest.

Sentiment in business might serve to epitomize Frank Miller's lifework in California. He taught many to abhor the unnecessarily ugly in the conduct of both public and private endeavor. A thing may be utilitarian and yet be beautiful. Frank Miller's life was utilitarian and beautiful.

More Soft Drinkers—

Coca Cola, America's most popular soft drink, soared to a lofty point in sales during the prohibition era. And, of course, the value of the firm's stocks followed the sales up.

Naturally, when beer came back it was expected that the soft drink would fall back, and, with this idea practically universal and undisputed, holders of stocks rushed to unload. But the slump did not materialize. Instead, the sales kept increasing, until today both sales and stock occupy an all-time high.

Why? Well, experts profess to be puzzled by this phenomena, but the answer, we think, is not obscure. Prohibition made possible the bringing up of a generation to adult age during which time beer was non-existent as a legal beverage. Youths contracted the harmless soft drink habit, and have continued it.

You hear that prohibition did not prohibit, and that's true, so far as the drinker already habituated to alcoholic drinks was concerned. But the absence of alcoholic drinks openly offered removed temptation and suggestion from a growing generation. And although we are urged to contemplate with concern the amount of drinking among youth today, the facts are that millions of young people still don't know the taste of liquor because they grew up in a time when it was not flaunted before them.

Lemon Restriction—

Regardless of constitutionality, the citrus growers must adopt a policy of restricted shipping to fit marketing needs.

The huge lemon pack this year is in reality a menace to the industry, a common condition where plenty produces the paradox of penalty. Human nature has always revolted at the thought of withholding or destroying commodities in order to maintain price. This has been condemned as the deliberate creation of a false scarcity. Where there is a great surplus of a commodity the natural reaction is to allow its use, no matter how cheap the surplus may make the market. But this is a fallacy in economics. If the marketing of a great surplus depresses the price to a point below cost of production it eventually ruins the producer, the entire industry becomes unprofitable and is abandoned. This happened to a very marked degree in the earlier history of the citrus industry, causing more than half of the lemon acreage to be budded over to oranges.

Of course the restriction of shipping is not the cure of a surplus in itself. There must be an authoritative restriction of lemon acreage, and a more rigid culling before shipping.

The time must come when all commodities must be restricted to the point of customer absorption. Eventually it will be unlawful to market any product below the cost of production. Because of the advancement of scientific agriculture; because of the constant improvement of cultural, packing and shipping methods, and unrestricted increase in acreage, the farmer and fruit raiser has been penalized instead of made more secure, until, as Arthur Brisbane asserts, the tiller of the soil has come to be a philanthropist without his consent.

An Orchid for Educators—

More than a casual word of commendation is deserved by our teachers in high schools and colleges.

They have shown a quiet and courteous courage under a barrage of criticism from those who hate new ideas and invariably obstruct change in the social order, and also from those who would destroy without plans for rebuilding.

During the depression these teachers have led in the discussions of social and economic problems, and have supplied adult classes with a forum where all manner of opinion might be freely expressed. Because these teachers purposed to bring social and economic problems into the open, they have been accused of disloyalty to the country, subversive activity and mischief-making thru untried theory. Every attendant at the adult classes knows, however, that all obtainable facts are presented, and out of these discussions has come a remarkable awakening of individual responsibility to the state and nation, a better and more (worth-while) patriotism than that which would discourage discussion. All down thru the ages the cause of liberty has been obliged to combat the forces of reaction, the apostles of the status quo, the doctrine that whatever has been and is, is right. If these forces had been successful we would still be in the stone age.

Reviewing the controversy over public education we are led to say that educators have proceeded with commendable sanity, discouraging with logic that type of reformer and agitator dubbed by Theodore Roosevelt, Sr., as belonging to the lunatic fringe, and at the same time admitting to the light of open reason the facts of our profound change in social and economic trends.

The forces of reaction and of unbalanced agitation, like the poor we have always with us. It is something about which to thankfully congratulate ourselves that we have built a free educational system that can successfully, courteously and courageously defy these forces, both equally subversive, and move onward in that direction where truth leads.

Regulating Business—

Talk of a constitutional amendment to provide a basic authority for federal regulation of business and finance can only be vague and unconvincing at the present time.

The NRA has probably definitely established the idea that authoritative regulation of industry is necessary, but the framing of an actual provision in the constitution cannot come until the thought of the country on this question has crystallized. No two persons can be found in the nation to agree on a paragraph that would express and epitomize the objective. It must always be remembered that basic law is not formulated; it formulates itself, and is only possible when custom and need have brought about a clear understanding.

We know that unrestricted competition is wrong and destructive; we do not know to what extent it should be restrained. We know that there are evils of business conduct peculiar to one part of the country; we do not know if a statute to cure that evil can be applied to all of the country. The fundamental mistake of the NRA was the attempt to enforce the blanket codes. A constitutional amendment must be a basic blanket code for all of the country. Such an amendment, in order to secure approval of the states, would have to be so greatly generalized as to in all probability be ineffective and abortive.

Congress has always had the right to regulate business. Virtually every piece of legislation enacted is a regulation of business. Congress, under the constitution, has always had the right to regulate and control finance. It holds the right of charter over every private bank. The right of banks to issue currency is a right in sufferance only, and may be revoked at any time.

It is difficult to envision any amendment for the control and regulation of industry which would strengthen the power of the government in this respect, or even supplement this power. Necessity for authority over business greater than business itself is recognized.

Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery at Fox-Pomona in "No More Ladies"

Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery, pictured above, are seen together again in what may be termed "a perfect comedy with a perfect cast," titled "No More Ladies," and which opens a five-day engagement at the Fox-Pomona theater starting Sunday, and closing Thursday night. This team has never failed to bring to the motion picture audiences the finest in comedy drama, and "No More Ladies" is one of their finest, not only in comedy, drama, setting and direction, but also in being supported by such an outstanding cast of favorite film comedians as Charlie Ruggles, Franchot Tone, Edna May Oliver, and Reginald Denny.

Fast, spirited, and very funny, "No More Ladies" builds rapidly to a climax of pure humor, to a party, staged in the picture, which will probably go down in history as one of the funniest scenes ever filmed. Joan has one of the most alluring parts of her career as Bob Montgomery's wife, this being different to any of their previous pictures, in that they get married before the picture ends and the situations that arise from their blissful wedded life go to make "No More Ladies" the funniest comedy of the season.

The "preview" feature with this program is "Black Sheep," featuring Edmund Lowe, Tom Brown, Claire Trevor and Eugene Pallette. It will be shown at all shows Sunday and once each night during the "No More Ladies" engagement.

Midnight preview Saturday night of "Dinky," featuring Jackie Cooper and Mary Astor in conjunction with the final showing of "Black Fury," featuring Paul Muni.

Experimental Forest in San Dimas Canyon Dedicated by Officials

lation of chaparral vegetation to the yield of usable water from mountain watersheds and of its functions in reducing erosion; and second, to develop methods of management or treatment of the vegetation so as to obtain a maximum yield of usable water with the minimum amount of erosion.

To accomplish this result the following problems are being attacked: By a system of studies in which vegetation-water relationships are investigated in progressive degrees of intensity:

1. Exact measurement of precipitation on mountain drainage basins;
2. Measurement of yield of water and debris from typical watersheds varying types of vegetative cover;
3. Analysis of the type of vegetation involved in water losses and control of erosion on mountain watersheds;
4. Determination of the consumption of water by native vegetation and by types of vegetation which might be substituted for the native chaparral; and
5. Quantitative determination of the environmental factors affecting water used by vegetation.

WATERSHEDS

To measure the summed effect of all environmental factors on rainfall, runoff and erosion, the major watersheds of the San Dimas and Big Dalton are subdivided into ten intermediate compartment watersheds, ranging in area from one for four-teen square miles.

Rainfall is measured very accurately by rain gauges spaced one-half mile apart mainly on a system of trails located on a contour at an elevation of 2100, 31,000, 4100, and 5100 feet. These rain gauges, some 275 in number, are read at the end of each storm.

Records of the rate of rainfall are obtained by fourteen intensity gauges which automatically record the rate and amount of precipitation on a chart. These gauges are distributed throughout the area as equally as possible, both by altitude and by intermediate watersheds.

Streamflow resulting from the rainfall is being measured at the mouth of each intermediate watershed by means of modified Parshall flumes of various sizes for flood flows, the one installed at the mouth of the east fork of the San Dimas being the largest of its character ever built, having a capacity of 3600 second feet.

The sum of all these stream-gauging stations will give the total streamflow from the experimental area which may be checked by records kept at the Los Angeles county flood control dams located near the mouths of the Big Dalton and San Dimas drainage.

A survey has been made of the Big Dalton reservoir and a similar survey of the San Dimas reservoir is planned. This will be followed by periodic re-surveys which will show the amount of debris deposited as the result of erosion on the major areas.

Experiments are being made with a group of small watersheds of similar environmental characteristics, in which the factor of vegetation is isolated by treatment. It is planned to leave one watershed with its present vegetation undisturbed, and to burn the other two, keeping one denuded by repeated burning and allowing the other to return to normal plant cover after the single burning. The difference in the yield of water and debris between burned and unburn-ed watersheds should evaluate the effect of vegetation on these two watersheds. These small watersheds are equipped with most elaborate and intensive means of measuring rainfall, runoff and erosion. This experiment is being made in Bell canyon at elevations between 2500 and 3400 feet, and in Fern canyon between elevations of 4500 and 5400 feet.

Experiments are in progress on miniature areas from which measured precipitation and surface runoff are recorded from small segments of a watershed denuded of normally vegetated conditions. At present the forest contains three such groups of plots. One installation consists of two pairs of 1/40-acre plots, one pair with normal chaparral cover, and the other pair kept denuded by burning.

The other two sets of plots contain three groups each of three plots—one group to be kept with normal cover, one continuously denuded, and one denuded and then allowed to return to natural chaparral cover. The tri-plot installations are located at 1600, 2700, and 5000-foot elevations, and contain vegetation typical of these altitudes.

The runoff from each plot is measured by catching the water in a concrete trough at the base of the plot and running it through a specially designed tipping bucket which catches 1/10 cubic foot of water and then dumps it and brings another bucket into position. Each movement of the bucket on each plot is recorded electrically on a moving strip chart synchronously with a record of the rainfall. Later inspection of the chart permits a comparison of the rate of runoff from the denuded, succession and natural plots in relation to rainfall.

In addition to the above plots for the study of watershed runoff and erosion, a series of seven plots have been established at the head of Wolfe canyon for measurement of the relative effectiveness of various methods of road-fill fixation for the control of erosion due to road disturbance.

LYSIMETERS

The following installations are now under construction at Tanbarak Flats in sufficient numbers to give thoroughly reliable data as to the measured loss of water due to evaporation and transpiration by growing plants.

A series of 50 metal phytometers, each having a capacity of 300 pounds of soil for the purpose of evaluating day by day transpiration and evaporation loss by weight; another series of 25 metal gravimeters, each having a capacity of 1800 pounds of soil is being built, allowing observations of the watercycle to be made both by weight and by measuring the volume of percolation and runoff, and a series of sixteen concrete lysimeters, each having a projected surface area of five miles and a depth of six feet are for the purpose of studying the watercycle and larger masses of soil and vegetation on longer rotations, provision being made for the measurement of both the intensity and the amount of runoff after a percolation.

METEOROLOGICAL STATIONS

Four meteorological stations are at present partially installed at elevations of approximately 1600, 2700, 4250 and 5000 feet. Installation of several more is contemplated, to complete the range of altitudes from the valley floor to timberline. These stations are equipped for measuring climatic and soil environmental factors; air hygrothermograph, soil

TALK ON NEW DEAL GIVEN BEFORE MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

Pointing out the value of Christian character in all walks of life, Earl Campbell, manager of the fruit and vegetable department of the Alpha Beta market, urged the members of the Men's Bible class of the Baptist church, meeting in the basement of the public library, to put forth greater effort in stimulating interest in the class by living lives that would command respect, and by inviting men to attend the class sessions. Mr. Campbell is in charge of the class expansion work and his efforts have already greatly increased the class attendance.

Following Mr. Campbell's talk last Sunday morning, A. H. Juniper gave a brief review of current events, in which he said in part:

"Unquestionably, the supreme court of the United States, a body of nine brilliant lawyers, holds the spotlight of the entire economic world. Its recent decision on the NRA, the very heart of the so-called New Deal, directly or indirectly affects every citizen of this nation. While the economists of other nations have had their eyes on Roosevelt and his New Deal, they have witnessed the downfall of one of the most flamboyant moves for administrative power that any nation, outside of dictatorship, has ever attempted. The downfall of the New Deal, like all other political events, has two sides to consider. This being the case, I feel that it is only fair to discuss it from two angles.

"On the one hand we have our large manufacturing and transportation interests, such as railroads, etc., our banking institutions, and all other branches of industry, where a large amount of money is used for the purpose of paying employees, buying raw materials, etc. These institutions were on a cut-throat basis, ready and willing to sell below cost in order to meet their competitors' prices. Naturally, there is only one solution to a wild orgy of this sort—bankruptcy and dissolution of the weakest—and this was taking place fast and furious. Small banks were forced to close their doors, and small manufacturers were crowded out. Against this terrific onslaught of competitive bidding, former employees found themselves facing closed shop doors, and with no weekly or monthly payrolls and no place to go for work on account of this loss of purchasing power, other factories and retail stores were forced to close their doors.

"This great nation of ours faced a sure and certain collapse. Something had to be done. Foreseeing this fact, our administrative leaders called the leading manufacturers and financiers to a round table conference, and out of that conference the NRA emerged. This act was passed by both houses, giving the administration the power to borrow money from the large financiers at a low rate of interest, and to loan to the manufacturers at the same rate of interest, thus making it a non-profit transaction for the government. This was done to keep the government out of the banking business. At the time this was made only for temporary purposes, expecting the slump in business to automatically right itself at an early date, and here that famous saying, 'Prosperity is just around the corner,' came into being.

"Our large industries, always looking for the extra dollars, conceived the idea of cutting men off their payrolls and putting more hours on the men who remained, for the same wage or less. This caused more men to be out of work, cut down the purchasing power throughout the nation, and caused a chaotic condition to again exist.

"Again something had to be done, so another conference was held, but this time only a selected few were consulted. These selected few turned out to be our much-talked-of brain trust. An amendment was tacked onto the National Recovery act whereby the president, and a committee that he might choose, would be given the power to regulate the activities of industries on selling, buying, and the hours and minimum wages of their employees. Again both houses of congress came to the president's rescue and passed the amendment.

"A little shy of the codes at first, our industrialists gradually welcomed the idea of getting away from the cut-throat policy. At the present time industries are sorely vexed at the decision of the supreme court. 'Statistics show us that seventy-seven per cent of our industries today are directly or indirectly supported by government money, and they fear that the government will cease to be a factor in the commercial field.

"They based this fear upon the downward fall of the stock market, followed by the supreme court's decision, and the president's stock market is still slumped from the effects of this message.

"On the other hand, the small business man, the laborer and the unemployed feel that the NRA, while it employed some few men, did not cover enough ground, so to speak. The liberals rather welcomed the court's decision, not that they thought it unconstitutional, perhaps, but because it might have a tendency to force the administration to greater efforts toward forming a permanent economic security for all, and to away forever with the present temporary dole system.

"But whatever we, as individuals, think of this matter, the fact remains that this recent move will effect each and every one of us.

"The outlawing of the NRA is an historical event in the life of America, and the eyes of the world are upon us, to see if our government shall rule a nation of democracy or shall a handful of lawyers tell our people what they can or cannot do? Evidently the answer to this question lies in Roosevelt's next move."

HAS AMERICAN BUSINESS THE CAPACITY TO SAVE ITSELF?

By J. L. MATTHEWS
Editor Covina Argus

It is my belief that the United States chamber of commerce should call regional conferences this summer for the purpose of conducting a symposium on five major problems now affecting normal business recovery.

These five subjects should be selected by the national board of directors in consultation with all branches of business. A questionnaire should be prepared and sent to regional leaders, who should submit copies to business and professional men and women considered to be most capable of analysis.

The national chamber should break down the results into a brief that would be representative of the thought of the country as relates to business and the financing of it. Such a document can then be submitted for general criticism and debate throughout the United States.

It is my thought that politics be avoided insofar as it is possible to do so in dealing with a subject that is so bound and influenced by the processes of government.

It becomes increasingly apparent that recovery is not to be predicated upon a return to methods employed prior to the economic collapse. The national chamber should be, and is, in a position to formulate this questionnaire, but illustrative of my thought I submit the following subjects for discussion:

(1) Has the cost of credit become too great to be successfully absorbed in the retail commodity price? What reforms are necessary to bring about more elastic credit opportunity to business? What actually constitutes security of loans under our present and profoundly changed economic conditions? Is real property any longer basic to loan security, even assuming that values shall rise to former levels? If not, what is the real basis of credit security?

(2) In common with nearly all fundamentals of business stability as viewed from pre-depression periods, has the tariff policy of this and all countries become outmoded and a retarding influence rather than a stimulant to trade? Is the complete embargo of goods in areas where such goods are competitive and not needed a superior method to that of restrictive tariff schedules? In other words, shall we and other countries work toward a policy of complete commodity exclusion where such commodities are regionally unwellcome, and allow for free and fluid flow of commodities where needed? How successful has been the operation of the process tax? Has foreign trade become permanently inconsiderable in any plan of domestic business stabilization?

(3) In what manner shall we consider the taking of machine profits and distributing such profits to unemployed and partially unemployed consumers? Is this present technological imbalance actually the cause of low buying power, and therefore of underconsumption? If so, shall the national government be allowed to increasingly become the collector and distributor of technological profits thru taxation on industry?

(4) Is it a fact that industry per se is powerless or unwilling to bring about reforms for its own good, and that therefore this function must be assumed in increasing degrees by government? Which is fundamentally true—that customs of conducting business, and real needs of industry, indicate the character of laws required, or that laws shall be first established and industry thereafter conform?

(5) How shall we prevent the profits of one industry from being invested in another industry where it becomes distressingly competitive? Do such investments constitute waste, which must eventually be borne by the consumer? Shall excess profit of any given industry be re-introduced into that industry thru retail price reductions, or shall it be removed from that industry by government distribution thru taxation? What is the precipitate a flight of capital to foreign countries? What actual relation does the arbitrary maintenance of price levels have on profits? If excess profits are re-introduced into the same industry thru price reductions will this tend to endanger all profits?

The above suggestions are made after reflecting upon the many discussions and controversies that have arisen out of the business conditions of the past five years. I set them forth merely as a guide by which more intelligent groupings may be evolved. It is from a nation-wide symposium, with its possibilities of clarification and of new data that I see the value in this proposal.

As one who has for more than forty years been continuously engaged as a newspaper editor, a business man and a participant in the politics of this country, I am ready to make the assertion that we are not to receive business salvation from government experimentation, no matter what political group or party may do the experimenting. I am one who believes that business must save itself, and that it has the power, the stamina, and the intellectual leadership so to do.

Formerly a practicing physician, the doctor spoke with authority upon the topic, "Christian Psychology as Applied to Social Morality." The address was an appeal for better teaching in the home of the facts and story of life. Her final conclusion in regard to the new problems of life for our young people was "Religion is the greatest safeguard, and that this truth should be taught in home, school and church by both precept and example."

Former Teacher Here Married at Church of Angels

Following a number of pre-nuptial courtesies, Miss Maxine Doerschlag, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Doerschlag of South Hudson avenue, Pasadena, became the bride of Frank Edward Arnold, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Arnold, in a five-o'clock service at the Church of the Angels in Garvanza on Sunday.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with white stock and delphinium.

The bride, an attractive blonde, chose a cloth of gold gown with matching picture hat. She carried Talisman roses. Mrs. Edward Conrad Collins, sister of the bride, wore pink crepe with matching accessories and carried a spray of delphinium. Ray Kerr of Pasadena served as best man.

The nuptials, which were witnessed by two hundred guests, were followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents for relatives and members of the bridal party.

The bride, a graduate of the University of California, is a member of Delta Gamma. Mr. Arnold is an alumnus of Michigan State college.

Following a wedding trip in the east, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold will return to Ventura, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Arnold was for several years assistant kindergarten teacher at the local grammar school and has a host of friends in this valley. She has been the recipient of several interesting affairs in Covina.

Those attending from Covina were Mr. and Mrs. Iven Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Milliken, Dr. and Mrs. C. D. Samuels, Miss Elizabeth Elliott, and Miss Angie Griswold.

La Paloma Chapter of Eastern Star Holds Guest Night

Tuesday evening of last week La Paloma chapter of the Eastern Star lodge held guest night at the Masonic temple. Mrs. Jennie Montgomery of San Dimas, deputy grand matron, was the guest of honor. The work of the various departments was exemplified for the report of Mrs. Montgomery to the grand chapter.

The address of the deputy matron was also made at this time.

Guests for the evening included Mrs. Florence Anderson of Puente, Mrs. Blanche Bechtel of Pomona, Mrs. Margaret Bernie of Chino, Mrs. Bertha Sackett of Glendora, Mrs. Pearl Holmes of San Dimas, Mrs. Lillian Stevens of Claremont, George Ritter of Pomona, Ed Nay of Pomona, and Mrs. Mary Warner of Ontario, grand associate conductress. A program of musical selections was presented by Mrs. Gladys Johnson.

TOWN CHATTER

At a recent party in his honor Jay Pitzer was presented with a copper badge in honor of his approaching fatherhood, and the members of the Lions club suggested that he either wear the badge at last Monday's meeting or pay a dollar fine. Jay arrived decked out, badge and all, but Hy Kemp met all the fellows at the head of the stairs with a beaming smile and a box of cigars and announced that he was the proud father of an infant daughter born on Sunday, so the badge was pinned on his chest for the rest of the meeting.

'Tis said that a group of prominent matrons of our town get up at six a.m. to walk off their pounds. Guess we'll just stay fat.

Don Shively, that very popular Covina Hi alumnus, has for the past year been an exchange student from Whittier college to the University of Hawaii and has been doing himself proud in the theater guild productions of that institution.

We wonder which is worse, a man without a country or to be the only man teacher at a school with eighteen women teachers. Byron Netzeley is the lucky (or unlucky) fella.

When a certain well-known round man about town tips his hat lately our more conservative citizens' eyes pop with amazement, for even though he says that his hat band has faded off on his hair, it looks as if he has gone Hollywood and dyed it red.

Wouldn't you like to know what popular young couple are looking at nursery furniture in anticipation of a blessed event occurring in the near future.

Those popular sub-debs, Babs McClure, Dor Cleghorn, Ginnie Gilbert, and Janet Knotts, were the belles of the ball at the recent alumna dance. The cleverest hair-does and the swankiest dresses! Oh me, to be young again!

The Job's Daughters of the valley are slinging a snazzy dance at the Masonic hall tonight. 'Tis said all the debs and their certain parties will be on deck.

Have you seen? Ruthie Goodrich's keen tan? Roy Winder's and Walter Allen's good-looking Palm Beach suits? and Keith Nichols' cousin, Chuck, from Inglewood, who has all the local co-eds adoring?

Helen Aby has abandoned the idea of a vacation in favor of a smart-looking Pontiac coupe to be delivered soon, and is she excited!

HOUSEERS ENTERTAIN GUEST AT SAN DIEGO—

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Houser of San Bernardino road and their houseguest, Miss Doris Litchfield of Stockton, and Miss Ethel Houser of Hollywood are spending several days this week in attendance at the exposition in San Diego. Miss Litchfield has been a guest in the Houser home for the past week, and will leave the latter part of this week for her home in the north.

FOSTERS HONOR SON AFTER GRADUATION—

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Foster of Puente street were hosts at a supper honoring their son, Gordon, a member of the graduating class, following the graduation exercises at the high school on Friday evening of last week. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. M. Deal and son, Merrill, Jr., Mrs. H. W. Deal, Mrs. Carrie Stillman of Hollywood, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred P. Foster of Des Moines.

The Golden Text is from Revelation: "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." The Lesson-Sermon includes these Scriptural selections from Genesis: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. . . . And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. . . . So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Among the correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, are the statements: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. State Gives $1,000,000 for Flood Control

Passage by the legislature before adjournment of the Riley bill, appropriating $1,000,000 for flood control work in Los Angeles county for the next biennium, means an increase of $200,000 per annum in the amount available for maintenance of flood control projects.

The flood control district is limited to the revenues from a 15-cent tax rate for maintenance and operation, interest and refunding of bonds. The latter two purposes absorb 11 cents of this rate, leaving only a four-cent revenue for maintenance and operation.

Appropriation for the biennium just closing, made for this purpose by the previous legislature, was $600,000, which results in an increase of $400,000 for the next biennium, or $200,000 per year.

Church of Brethren to Observe Fiftieth Anniversary Sunday

the whole tract of approximately 1000 acres at $33,000. Some of the members thought to buy and colonize, but because of some difficulty in raising the proper amount the deal did not go thru. Mr. Phillips donated the lot on which the church now stands, and the church paid $50 for the other one.

The first communion was held October 17, 1885, in an old skating rink tent. Present at the communion were thirty-seven, for the number was given by this time as the Shellys, Cripes, M. N. Overholtzers, and Uncle Peter Overholtzer had moved into the community.

They continued to hold meetings in the different homes, the tent and hall, even though they lived 25 and 35 miles apart. Brother Riley's family lived at Tropic. His letter to membership, dated September 19, 1874, was given by an Indiana church. He became an ardent supporter of the church, giving liberally of his means.

In the spring of 1885 S. A. Overholtzer and Daniel Houser came. These homes became guest houses for members and others who came into the community. The Overholtzers entertained sixty-two at their home one night during a love feast time.

The first baptism was on October 20, 1887, when William and Mattie Overholtzer and Lucy Kelly were baptized. There was no running water, so the water ditches were dammed to make a place for baptism. The first election of church officials was held January 5, 1889, when Frank Calvert, now of Glendora, and Derius Overholtzer were elected deacons.

BUILDING COMPLETED
The first house of worship was built in 1886, but not completed until October, 1888, when it was decided to ceil and plaster. At first it was seated with chairs. It was dedicated by P. S. Myers. In five years a large addition was made to the south side.

In 1901 the bees found a home in the walls and in removing the honey, a smoker was left lying on the roof and by 3 o'clock in the morning the house was discovered in flames. It was a complete loss, as the insurance had lapsed. Meetings were held in Independence hall on East Badillo street until the present house was completed. The cost was about $4000 and it was dedicated by S. E. Decker on November 17, 1901, first of debt. T. E. Finch, J. H. Brubaker, and Jerry Shank were the building committee, who with several other members did the actual building.

Another church house was built in Glendora, where services were held for while on alternate Sundays, but the congregation was still considered a part of the Covina church. Brother Norcross was the moving figure in raising $1553 for this house. In 1928, the present parsonage was built on the lot north of the church at a cost of $3000. Frank Ebersole of La Verne was the contractor.

The first Sunday-school was organized April 4, 1888, with G. F. Chamberlain general superintendent. Sunday-school has been conducted ever since. At the present time Mrs. Denn Fessler is general superintendent; Elmer Boots, associate superintendent; Mrs. J. P. Overholtzer, junior superintendent; Mrs. Marion Boots and Mrs. H. M. Brubaker, primary superintendents; and Mrs. Quinter Pittle and Mrs. Elsie Perry, cradle-roll superintendents.

LIST OF MINISTERS

Many different ministers have served us these fifty years. From our own number, S. W. Funk and William M. Platt were elected more than forty years ago; Derius Overholtzer, January 7, 1893; D. J. Overholtzer and Oscar Mathias, October 21, 1899; Harry Brandt, October 13, 1906; Fred Chamberlain and Walter Heppner, June 28, 1912. Walter and Fred asked to be given time to finish their education and were installed later.

Those who have served as elders are the following: A. F. Deeter, J. S. Flory, Peter Overholtzer, J. W. Trostle, D. A. Norcross, C. Wine, J. S. Brubaker, G. F. Chamberlain, Harvey Snell, J. M. Boaz, Edgar Rothrock, and Leland S. Brubaker. Mr. Chamberlain served almost continuously from 1901 to 1924. He was elected to the ministry some time in 1899 in the Conejo congregation. He gave of his service to the church unstintingly without receiving financial compensation enough to be mentioned. He was pastor of the church on part-time for two years. To him and the other faithful ones who served the church so admirably and graciously for so many years simply because they loved the cause of Christ and the church, should go our honor and praise. Would that more would see the vision of unselfish voluntary service in the cause of our King!

Rev. J. A. Smeltzer, with his wife, came from Illinois to be our first full-time pastor, and he served the church from January 1, 1922, till July, 1924. J. M. Boaz and wife came to succeed him in May, 1926, and left to take over the mission point in Oakland in July, 1928. Leland S. Brubaker and wife came to take up the work in July, 1928, and have served since then until the present. We loaned Leland to the mission board that he might go on a deputization team to visit our foreign work. He will have been gone eleven months upon his return to us in July of this year. Missionary work has had its place in the organization since its beginning, for in one of the first meetings a small offering was taken for worldwide missions and up until the present day the interest still holds. Brother Daniel Houser gave liberally to the mission work, donating his 80-acre orange grove on Citrus avenue to the mission board.

INTERESTED IN COLLEGE

This church has also been interested in La Verne college, Brothers Houser and S. A. Overholtzer being among its founders. Many of our young people have gone there for their education and have made fine citizens. A number are in the business world, some are orange growers, some are in the teaching profession, some are dentists, and some are preparing for doctors. Harry Brandt is assistant editor of the Gospel Messenger. Walter Heppner has risen high in the educational world, recently being elected president of the state teachers' college at San Diego. We think we have some of the finest young people in the world. They are organized into a Christian service. We look to them to carry on the work of the church and maintain the faith of our fathers.

The women have not been idle. The first Aid society was organized in the fall of 1900, when Jennie Brubaker was president. Some of the early workers were Mrs. Jerry Shank, Emma Platt, Angeline Overholtzer, Peter Fessler, and others who sacrificed for the work. Mrs. S. W. Funk is our present aid director, and Mrs. Charles Fessler the director of women's work at large. Mrs. Ben F. Heppner is director of Mothers' and Daughters', Mrs. Milton Brock of missions, and Mrs. Merle Butterbaugh of the Bible study.

FIRST EVANGELIST

Rev. Jacob Whitmore was the first evangelist who came in the early beginning of the work. Twenty-five were converted at this meeting. Other evangelists who have served the church are Daniel Vaniman, D. L. Miller, I. J. Rosenberger, Rev. McRadden, M. S. Franz, S. C. Lehmer, C. S. Garber, Andrew Hutchinson, J. H. Cassaday, H. J. Heisey, and perhaps others who have failed to mention.

When the Brethren first came into the valley, water was uncertain, as it was then in litigation. Some left and went to other sections. The Finches, Shellys, Frank Heppner, G. F. Chamberlain, Wine and others went to Conejo valley, where they were organized into the Conejo church in 1889, thus taking members from the Covina church. Another church to have been organized from this church was Tropic in 1900. When the Los Angeles area was organized in 1924, Tropic was included in that church. Glendora was organized into a separate congregation in 1902. Santa Ana in 1904, Long Beach in 1907. Other churches have been organized until up to the present time there are more than thirty churches in California.

God has not promised sunshine without some rain, so the pathway of the Covina church has not always been smooth, but out of it we feel we have emerged with wiser minds and better ability to see the others' viewpoint. This has drawn us nearer our desired haven.

Our story is ended. There may have been some errors but the facts have been given as nearly true as it was possible to gather facts. May we more steadily move forward, strong in faith and courage to meet our problems. There are many yet in our midst who need salvation, the type of living should be lifted, and evils should be suppressed. May this be a challenge to our young people to carry on, so that the faith and principles be not lost.

Money Collected for Rent at Fair Grounds

Collection of a total of $579 for rentals of stalls at the Los Angeles county fair grounds at Pomona, from November 1, 1934, to May 1, 1935, was reported to the supervisors this week by County Auditor H. A. Payne.

After collecting some $210 in back rentals, the auditor's office found it impossible to keep track of the people who were using the fair facilities, as a man was placed on the job for sixty days to look after the county's interest.

By this means a further $344 was collected from those who were stabling their horses on the grounds.

Little Known Facts About Banking

If Banks Were Operated for Profit Only

Nowhere in the world do the banks put service to the community ahead of profits as in the United States.

The truth of this is shown in a recent survey, which revealed that "in the average bank 50% of the depositors carry but 3% of the total deposits" . . . In other words, American banks sacrifice profits by providing better banking facilities to more people than is considered necessary by banks in other countries. But that is the "American spirit" of American banking.

Need we add that service to the community comes first at this bank? Here the small depositor receives the same service as the larger depositor, and his account is just as welcome.

BIG VALENCIA CROP REMAINS TO BE MOVED

Paul Armstrong Tells Growers of Problem of Marketing

The Valencia season is off to a good start with 15,000 cars moved to June 15, but the statistical picture for the balance of the season is none too bright with 45,000 cars estimated remaining after June 1 compared with 25,500 cars shipped after that date last season, Paul Armstrong, general manager of the California Fruit Growers Exchange, told the citrus institute in Santa Ana last Saturday. He stressed the need for increasing demand and described the sales and advertising efforts of the Exchange.

The movement to date includes over 3000 cars exported and 1000 cars to by-products. Exports of Valencia after June 1 are estimated at 2000 cars. The Exchange has exported over 900,000 boxes of Valencia to date and has another 450,000 boxes booked for the balance of June and July, Armstrong said.

Even with the heavy exports and if 2500 cars could be held to go after November 1, there remains 60 per cent more Valencia for domestic markets than was sold last year during June to October inclusive.

"Some say the official estimate is high and will be further reduced by small sizes, crystallization and natural deterioration," he said. "Even though such reductions prove substantial, every grower and shipper should consider a current elimination program on least desirable sizes and grades."

"I give you the facts as they exist, thinking you would rather face facts than have me give a general optimistic statement based on hope rather than reality," he told the large gathering of growers.

The Exchange head reminded the growers that in giving so much attention to control of supply, they must not forget that it is still more important to widen distribution and increase demand. This had not been overlooked, he said, and the industry was making every effort to do so.

"We are making every effort to make more and make it faster. Citrus sales since the depression have averaged 24,000 cars a year more than when the country was prosperous, an encouraging fact."
